The Late Hongkong Voluntoors. TO THE EDITOR OF THE " DAILY PRESS." Str. Once upon a time (not a dozen years ago) there was formed in Hongkong an Artillery Volunteer Corps. Some two or three years managed, after a good deal of trouble, to form a he Riffe Corps, which, however, lasted but a short ill time, and was then merged into the ranks of 8. the artiflery. The same grievances which broke to ap the rifles somehow managed to creep into the other things, and the end of it all resulted in a break up of the artillors. existed. I believe, it was never in fight, and at the general meeting convened by the then cominandant, the treasurer reported a surales of sumothing like 2500, a splendid set of land instruments, including a dram major's stick mounted in silver, a silver bugle, and something to be got from the Government as cumpensation for the Volunteer Head Quarterce. house. The Volunteers were allowed to keep in their accontrements, but to return their earlines and sword bayonets. A committee was then thosen to wind up the affairs, and is soon as ery the carbines and bayonets had been called in. and all claims against the corps settled, they re- promised to call a meeting of the late Vo. nce lunteers, and have its opinion upon the disposal of the surplus. Well, some two years have sed clapsed since then, and I, as an old Volusteer, to and one who attended at the meeting appointhed ling the committee, have never beard one word ere of a meeting, or how the fauls have been distor moved of, or unything else. And, moreover, it no. inson to point out the netnal facts of its present

After Prince Knog's coup d'élat of 1861, and acceptance of their new relationship with foreign nations, the Celestials entered upon a new and improved phase in their national history. This was further improved id he by the assistance which Sir Frederick Bruce, Admiral Hope Captain Roderick Dow, P.N., Colonel Gorden, and other foreigners rendered in suppressing the Tai-ping rebellion. With the fall of Nanking in July, 1854, that rebellion never | was virtually ended, but there are still persons and a while auppress it to be yet in existence. benefit of these we may recall the facts relating to its last dying struggles. When Nanking was taken, Hung Sew-tenen, the Tai ping mounanch, was found dead, baving committed suicide; the Patthful King, the Shield King, and his other brincipal chiefs, were executed by the imperialists; the provinces of Kianggoo and Chekiang were entirely restored to Imperialist rule; and at that time the Tai-pingu had no footing elsewhere in Chies. Only a regissoit of them who notive escaped from Nanking and other places went must down through the sterile mountains which border on Cheking, Kinngsi, and Lutikien, under the leadership of two insignificantibilities. the Kang Wang and the maistant king. Out of these industains they emerged in 1865 and took the city of Chanchow, near Amoy, in Fuhrien. A few foreigners, who had served either with or against them, joined them at this time, and Leadhe attendant king, put forth a the ridiculous proclamation, calling on foreign ading nations to join with him in partitioning Chine. But the Imperial Government brought down a lew thousand troops, who had been disciplined much to the use of foreign arms at the Fung-yang When Shan camp of instruction, which had been nce, he organized by Colonel Gordon before he left en in China, and quickly drove the Tai-pings back ige his into the uninhabited mountains between the cases provinces of Quangling, Fukian, and Kiangsi, cent. where they probably perished miserably. At had all events, they have never been heard of since small which they brought. The rebels of which we have heard since then have been the Nienfel, or manualers of the
